

Family Bookmaking Day

Sunday January 13th

👉 It's Fun! It's Free! 👈

The first Family Bookmaking Day of the new year is Sunday, January 13th, from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the San Francisco Center for the Book. Open to adults and kids age 12 or younger, this free event makes a great introduction to the book arts. Teachers and librarians are always welcome, too.

Sunday's event features five bookmaking activities, including one especially for grown-ups to make for kids:

Scavenger Hunt Books. Create personalized clues and tuck them into pages made from zip-lock baggies. Easy, fast and reusable. Great for car trips, rain-day fun, nature hikes, parties and more.

Word Pictures. Explore a fun and funky way to jazz up your handmade books by playing with the building blocks of every page—letters and words.

Rubber Band Books. This simple binding produces surprisingly glamorous results that kids can use for collections of recipes, jokes, leaves, stamps; travel journals, and more.

Pop-Up Storybooks. This 4-panel accordion houses the pages for a story in one valley fold and a pop-up character in the other valley fold.

Accordion Collages. Similar in structure to the Pop-Up Storybook, this accordion features decorative hard covers and makes a beautiful display for small collages.

Date: Sunday, January 13th
Time: 9:30 a.m.–1:30 p.m.
Place: San Francisco Center for the Book
300 De Haro Street @ 16th Street
Info: Please call 415-565-0545 to register

The San Francisco Center for the Book is presenting this activity for free under its grant-funded program, The ABC Initiative: The Art of the Book in the Classroom, and we'd like to extend our thanks to current funders, The San Francisco Foundation and the Walter & Elise Haas Fund.